1. Files are easy to control and manipulate but devices are not the same as files so you might have less control over the device. It might be easier to understand since you are using the same calls but files and devices are not the same and do not have the same functionality.
2. Yes because the command interpreter lets you manage processes and is all accessed by a user level program using system calls.